

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

The task, in truth, belongs more properly to those public societies, which have been established professedly for this, amongst other national objects. And it cannot be denied, that by a republication of our most scarce and most valuable works, and by a publication of some of our ancient MSS., they would confer a far more essential benefit on the cause of Welsh learning, than if they were to hold an Eisteddfod every month in the year. Such meetings, no doubt, have their utility; but it is trifling and evanescent, in comparison with that, which must result from a judicious promulgation of those literary stores of past times, which may otherwise be lost for ever. Yet, although so many months have elapsed since the formation of the first literary institution in Wales, nothing whatever has yet been achieved in this way, and, what is worse, nothing appears to be contemplated. Now, would it not be highly advisable, with reference to this subject, that the superfluous subscriptions (if there be any) of the several societies should be united in one fund for the purpose alluded to? And, perhaps, if this fund were deposited with the Cambrian Institution in London, it would be the most effectual method of accomplishing the proposed object. But, be this as it may, something ought speedily to be done in this respect, if it were only to rescue the Welsh societies from the disgrace of being considered merely as so many assemblies of sinecurists, whose patriotism was to end with their professions.

OLD MANUSCRIPTS.—It would materially serve the cause of our national literature, if individuals in possession of any ancient and curious MSS. would make them known to the world. And, if no better medium should present itself, the CAMBRO-BRITON would always be open to their communications. It is also to be hoped, that, among the other embryon projects of our literary institutions, that of searching foreign libraries for the ancient remains of Welsh genius and learning will not be forgotten.

* * *

ERRORS CORRECTED.

- P. 55, l. 26, for "charity," read chastity.—l. 32, for "is," read was.
 P. 56, l. 23, for "parablan," read parblau.
 P. 58, l. 18, for "these," read those.
 P. 61, l. 2, for "Neinio," read Ninio.—l. 23, for "Gadern," read Gadarn;
after "Arch. of Wales," in the notes, insert Vol. ii.
 P. 74, l. 6, for "hen," read ben.—l. 19, for "refais," read cefais; l. 20, for "gobm," read godyn.
 P. 87, l. 3, of the Poetry, for "patients," read patriots.